

The Augusta Evans Wilson Literary Society was established to honor the founding of Phi Mu Fraternity as a literary society for women at Wesleyan Female College. Ms. Wilson was a member of the Philomathean Society, the name used prior to the adoption of the Greek letter name, Phi Mu. A widely read author of the 19th century, Ms. Wilson published a book, St. Elmo, in 1866 and it was considered the “Gone With the Wind” of the time.

To honor Ms. Wilson and the values of the members of the Philomathean Society, the Augusta Evans Wilson Literary Society was established to recognize members of Phi Mu who are published authors of books with an assigned ISBN number. The Phi Mu author's names and their books are displayed in the Library at National Headquarters.
